

Crook's Campaign.

HOW HE WON GLORY.

Washington, July 16.—A gentleman who was present says that at the Crook conference between the secretaries of war and of the interior, Commissioner Price, head of the Indian bureau, asked Crook whether it was true as reported that he had been practically captured by the Chiricahuas and had only succeeded in getting back and bringing them with him by promising to put them back on the San Carlos reservation, and that Gen. Crook admitted that to be the fact. The secretaries felt bound to fulfill, says the gentleman, the terms of Crook's ransom.

A gentleman who was present is authority for the statement that the story which Crook told Secretaries Teller and Lincoln at their conference was that, trusting to the faithfulness of his Apache scouts, he did not take a large enough contingent of white troops, and the Apaches proving unfaithful, he was

IN HOT WATER

From the time that he crossed the border. He realized that only the most polite course would prevent him and his white soldiers from being massacred and that he must employ cunning measures in order to get back with the semblance of honor. So he marched right on, surrounded by watchful toes. The scouts insisted on dividing all the duties of the march with the white soldiers. Crook had to let them do as they desired. Arrived at the refuge of the fugitive Apaches, Crook used his personal influence with the scouts, asking them to induce the fugitives to return to the United States. He told them he was a man of peace and of honesty; he would like to see war end and peace come. He was willing to guarantee the fugitives a peaceful life on their old reservation if they would return peacefully. This suited the fugitives. They knew Crook to be honest, and were willing to take his word. The braves would not return with him, but they sent back some of the squaws and children, rather as spies than as hostages. Meanwhile, the braves are waiting the ratification of Crook's agreement. When the refusal of Teller to permit the hostiles to come back to the reservation was telegraphed west, some of the squaws were sent with the news to Mexico. The fugitive braves may be war-path again.

Killed by a Kid.

MARSHALL, Mo., July 17.

The details of a peculiarly sad homicide reached this city to-day, and it is doubtful whether any county in the state has ever produced a younger murderer.

Near Prairie Ridge, Saline county, on Saturday last, a young lad named George Conger, only sixteen years old attacked a boy named Sweden Joliffe, ten years of age. Several days ago an older brother of young Joliffe had chastised Conger, who felt quite sore, and when he met the younger brother he proposed taking his spite out on him. He chased the lad quite a distance, and on overtaking him was in the act of giving him a beating with a stick.

Joliffe warned Conger to desist, telling him he was going to cut him if he did not. Conger paid no heed to the warning, when young Joliffe pulled out a Barlow knife and cut his assailant in three places—on his shoulder, side and head.

Realizing his condition, Conger made his way to the residence of a farmer named Holmes, where his wounds were dressed. He grew worse rapidly but lingered until yesterday, when death claimed him.

The affair has caused universal sorrow in the community where the tragedy occurred, and on every hand sympathy is expressed for the boy who felt compelled to take the life of a fellow being in order to save his own. Conger was burned to-day, and Joliffe has been placed under arrest.

Caution is necessary in feeding green-ry or clover and rank grass for soiling for fear of bringing on hoven or other disease. Feed a small quantity at first, gradually increasing the quantity.

G-t Ready For Cholera.

K. C. Journal.

Notwithstanding the serious damage of Saturday's rain storm it may have been one of those blessings in disguise with which we are so often confronted. The washing which it gave the streets could not fail of taking away much of pestilential-breeding matter, and much which would promote and aggravate the ordinary ills of mankind. It, therefore, the industrious work of the sanitary force of the city promptly and industriously supplement the work of the elements and take away that which was impeding in its efforts to go. Confidence may very well inspire our people when the dreaded Asiatic cholera comes from London to New York and starts on its journey inland.

The medical authorities with one voice demand that east London "be at once taken under the most stringent control." The best opinion has said that the cholera has already made its way through the Suez canal on English ships and reached the English metropolis. The Madrid government complains that the British authorities at Gibraltar continue to neglect quarantine against vessels from Egypt. The rumor is current that cholera has actually been introduced into Spain. The next jump will bring it across the Atlantic, and a panic will seize upon our cities not prepared to meet its ravages.

Let us not be longer tardy. The time is auspicious for effectual cleaning and draining. It will cost no more now than a month later, and the knowledge that we are fortified against the danger will be worth millions in the consequent assurances of protection from the scourge.

Lincoln on McClellan.

From the Detroit Free Press.

In a recent address at Bellevue, Mich., ex-Gov. Austin Blair gave an account of the convention of governors of Northern states that met at Altoona, Pa., at the time of the issuing of the Emancipation proclamation by President Lincoln in 1862. The convention was called to induce him to issue a proclamation or do some act that should set at liberty the 4,000,000 slaves; but the president outwitted the 22 governors by issuing the proclamation the same day their convention met. The governors then decided to go on to Washington and present to the president, not the urgent resolutions they had intended, but an address complimenting him upon the step he had taken. This address was prepared in an able manner by Gov. Andrew of Massachusetts, who read it to President Lincoln as he sat at his desk, while the governors were seated around the room. After that an incident happened that Gov. Blair said he had never before heard related to any one. Gov. Kirkwood of Iowa, since a United States senator and secretary of the interior, rose and said:

"Mr. President, I should be delighted could I return to my home and say to the people of Iowa that the President of the United States believes Gen. Geo. B. McClellan is a loyal man." He branched off upon other subjects connected with the war and then closed by repeating with more emphasis: "I should be glad, Mr. President, to be able to tell the people of Iowa that you believe in the loyalty and patriotism of George B. McClellan."

Taking his feet down from the desk upon which they had been resting, Mr. Lincoln sprang to his feet and straightened up, apparently much excited: "Loyal! George B. McClellan is as loyal as any of you." Then stopping a moment the president's face assumed its naturally pleasant look, and he continued in a natural and pleasing tone: "I'll tell you, gentlemen, General McClellan is an exceedingly well informed general, and is very careful, in fact, too careful, and the great trouble with him is that when he wins a victory he doesn't know what to do with it."

"Why not try somebody else?" mildly suggested Gov. Blair.

"We might do that and might lose an army by it," was the quick response of the president, which Gov. Blair admitted "completely unhorsed him."
